Dear people of the future,

We are writing to you to tell you about the coronavirus crisis that began in 2020. We thought it would be short and we would be out of our houses after a few weeks, but still, we have to wear masks and sanitise our hands wherever we go.

Here is a poem for you!

Coronavirus is taking over our world.

On our own, we stay in our rooms.

Reading alone, always joining zooms.

Online school all made us miserable.

News all around, the rumours pass.

All of us wanted to go back to class.

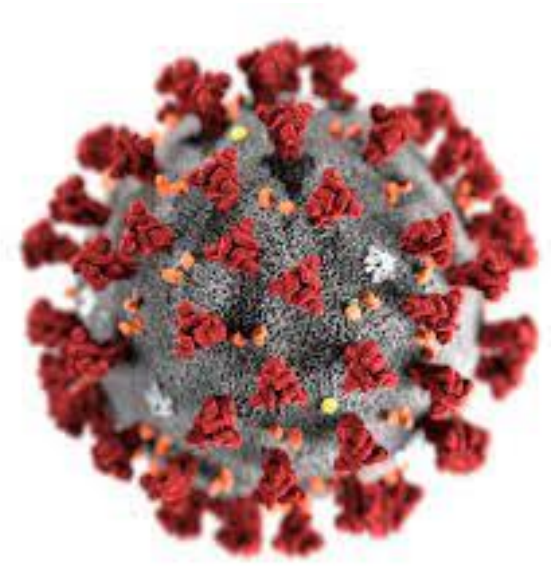
Variant after variant, when will it stop.

In my head, I just want to make banana bread.

Ready to get back outside.

Universe so small.

So I survived, it made us learn to appreciate all.



Yours faithfully

From 2022. Jenny, Flo and Hattie from year 11.
